Report on the document referencing tool
(Deliverable D8)

Montpellier, 24 February 2009

Project coordinator:

Dr. Michel FOK (michel.fok@cirad.fr)

1. Introduction

It is not always easy to find out references dealing with specific societal issues related to cotton production. Although there are many literature reference data bases that can be consulted, they are all classifying publications according to keywords which are not very clear about the socio-economic issues they pertain to. Consequently, the consultation leads to very large numbers of documents among which it is very difficult to identify the ones which are the most relevant to the societal issues under question. Besides, the characterization of documents, according to keywords, also is not perfect for two reasons. First, there is no guiding tool to select the most appropriate keywords at the characterization stage. Second, there is no clear connection between keywords and societal issues raised by cotton production and processing.

The conception of a scientific document referencing tool was scheduled in the framework of the ISSCRI Project. The commitment of the Project partners was restrained to conceiving a pilot tool to be tested by the Project partners. This purpose was upgraded to adjusting a tool operational through Internet, opening its use to all researchers potentially interested.

2. Original computerized tool for document referencing

The ISSCRI Project targets at setting up a new tool to overcome these shortfalls, by carrying out a hierarchic thesaurus connecting keywords to societal topics. Anticipating the fact that the concerns our societies feel about cotton production may evolve over time, the hierarchic thesaurus must also have enough flexibility to evolve.

The Project has committed to firstly develop the tool through using a common data base software (Microsoft Access), the expected product was to be used separately in France, Spain and Greece by the project partners, giving rise to three data bases whose consolidation would correspond to a regional data base.

The development task was conducted in 2007, at the first year of the ISSCRI Project. It has led to the COLIRE tool (for COtton LIterature REferencing tool), as an Microsoft Access application. The information on the data base conceived is provided in the report of a graduated student CIRAD has supervised (in French), a simplified version of the users' book has been written in English. These two documents correspond indeed to deliverable D3 supplied in month M8.

The main constraint of data bases is feeding because it is time-demanding. This constraint is particularly conspicuous because of the common centralization process of data feeding. The Project coordinator felt that the constraint could be overcome through an approach of shared and decentralized feeding, by members of a common research group. This approach implies that data bases must be fed through Internet. The transcription of COLIRE into an Internet tool was explored along the supervision of the graduated student's work. The outcome achieved was sufficient to enable the Project coordinator to convince his institution, CIRAD, to supply extra financial means to develop a first version of the Internet tool.

The development has been externalized because of the lack of human resources in CIRAD. This externalisation was conducted by a Junior Firm related to a University (in Nice), under terms of specifications provided by CIRAD. The development started in February 2008, it was finalised in August 2008. It was operational through Internet from September 2008, enabling each partner of the Project to record most relevant scientific documents regarding the socio-economic topics of cotton production.

The new document referencing tool is called SLIRE (for Scientific Literature REferencing). It is designed to operate for as many research networks as possible, having their own specific hierarchic thesaurus split down from their common research themes.

The tool appears to be original enough that CIRAD proceeded to intellectual property protection which was eventually allocated by the "Agence pour la protection des programmes" (cf. document attached).

SLIRE is yet operating at <http://www.slire.net/slire> . Information about this tool is provided at the ISSCRI website <http://www.isscri.org/necso/colire> where the users' manual is available. This latter is attached in annex.

Like any computer tool, the very first version cannot be perfect. SLIRE is not totally multilingual, its use and presentation can be made friendlier. This is particular true when is considered the exportation of the document research. The current exportation in pdf format is not suitable to the expectations of many users. The CIRAD team already has clear ideas to improve the current versions. It also expects to have additional fund to move forward the improvement. For this reason, the Project coordinator is not publicising too much the SLIRE tool to other research networks. This is postponed after upgrading the existing version.

3. Current contents of SLIRE about cotton

The Project partners have referenced 73 documents (29 in Spain, 18 in Greece and 26 in various countries). The consultation of these document referencing is easy through <http://www.slire.net/slire>. The exportation in pdf format permits to capture the title of the documents, the document types, the internet websites through which the documents could be read or downloaded. As yet mentioned, this exportation format (see annex) could and should be improved, for instance by enabling the activation of the indicated websites or email addresses.

Welcome to our Scientific Literature Referencing Internet Tool which is original by various ways, notably through the use of hierarchic thesauruses carried out by various networks of researchers.

SLIRE is a tool dedicated to researchers gathered into networks, having common research topics. For a given researchers' network, their common topic could be split into more simple items. This decomposition pertains to a hierarchic thesaurus against which scientific documents of common interest could be referred.

SLIRE hence enables researchers in network to have a common tool to work on, and this pertains to document referencing to assist in literature review.

SLIRE is innovative in the sense that it promotes the approach of decentralized document referencing, by the authors of the scientific documents, instead of a classical centralization by librarians.

SLIRE can work for as many researchers' network as one can imagine, or in other words, for many thesaurus in the same time.

Any coordinator of researchers' network can ask to manage document referencing through SLIRE. Request must be sent to michel.fok@cirad by indicating the name of the thesaurus he wants to use. In return, the requester will get a username, a password as the administrator of the thesaurus for his/her researchers' network. It will be his/her duty to develop his/her thesaurus. Separate manual will be provided to him/her in this case.

SLIRE is flexible, thesaurus can be adjusted along its use. The thesaurus administrator can take into account the suggestions of the network members to implement amendments.

No documents are stored but indications can be given to know how to get them (through Url of websites or emails of authors)

You can consult what is recorded in our data bases (click SEARCH).

If you want recording scientific documents into our data base, you must first join in (click NEW MEMBER) or log in if you have already joined in (Click CONNECT).

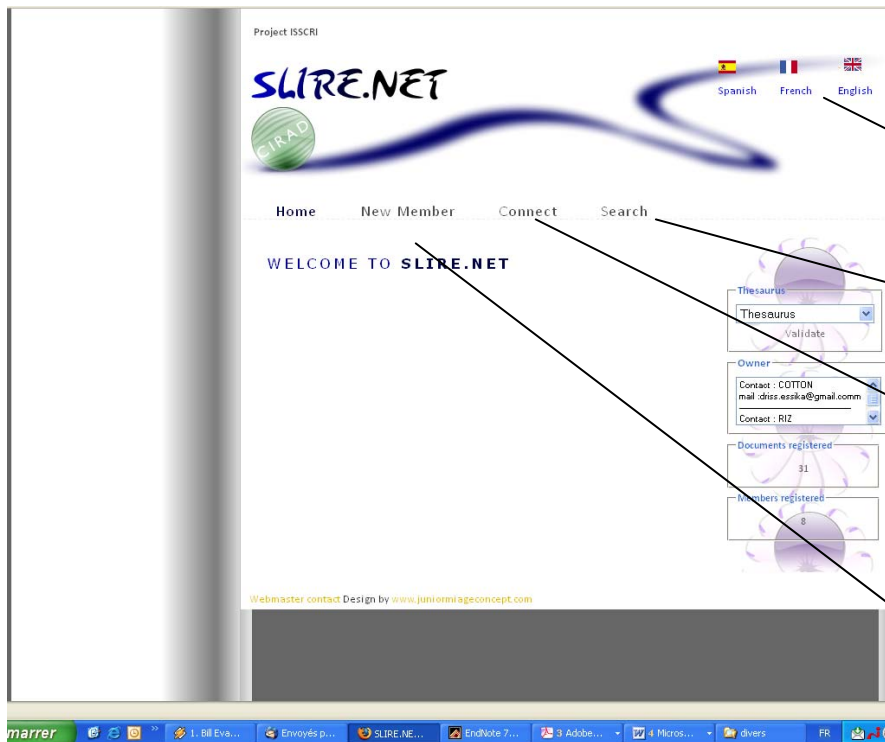

This is the first version of SLIRE. It's quite normal that it is not yet perfect. A great deal of the imperfections will be corrected in the second version.

What you see when you log in <http://www.slire.net/slire/index.php?&lang=en>

Here is the SLIRE.NET homepage

Back to top

The tool is still partially multi-lingual. Better to work by selecting "English" although it works also pretty well in French

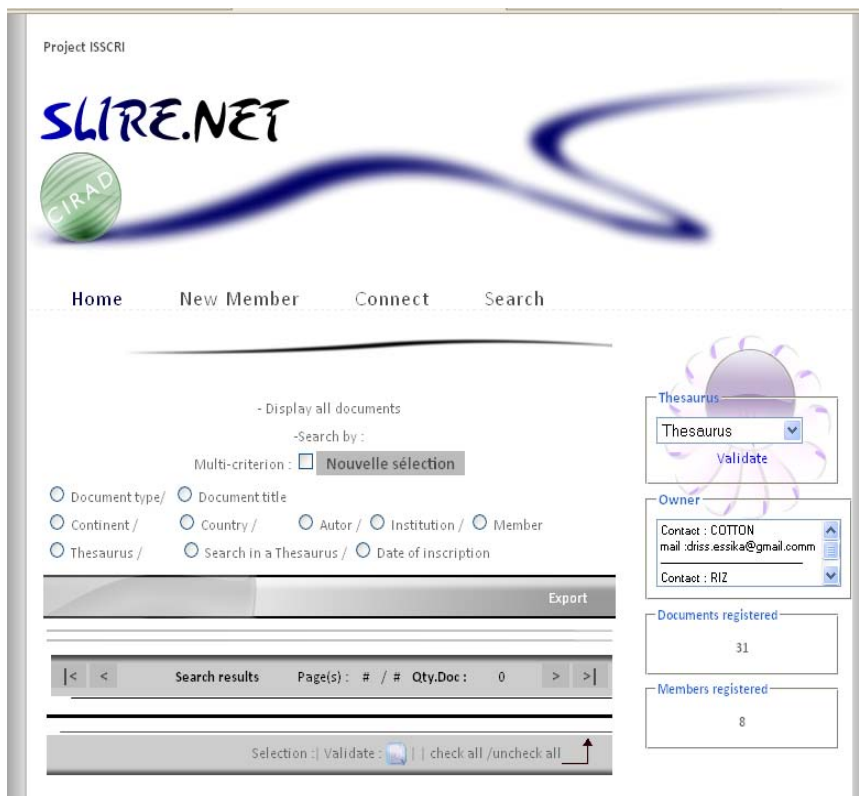

Click on search to consult the contents of the SLIRE database

Click on "connect" if you are already a member of a research network which has carried out its thesaurus

Click on to join a research network using SLIRE

Consult: You have clicked on "search", here is what you see

Back to top

It is possible to search according to various criteria as displayed here. Once you select a criterion, a scroll-down menu will assist you. You can also search through several criteria. To do so, you tick next to "multi-criterion" and you can pile sequentially as many criteria as you want in a single selection. Tick a criterion, select then a modality, click OK. Select another criterion, ..etc. You have to click on "new selection" to begin from the start of the multi-criteria selection. The originality is to select through thesaurus

Simple search

Back to top

What you get after selecting "country" and choosing "Benin" in the country scroll-down menu

The screenshot shows the SLIRE.NET search interface. At the top, there is a navigation menu with 'Home', 'New Member', 'Connect', and 'Search'. Below this, there are search options: '- Display all documents', '- Search by:', and 'Multi-criterion: Nouvelle sélection'. The search criteria are set to 'Country / Benin'. The search results show 5 documents. The first document is titled '61 | Mondialisation, distorsion de concurrence et évolution technologique : portée et limites du succès du coton en Afrique Zone Franc'.

You see that there are five documents corresponding to your search. Pass the mouse over the title of one identified article, to see if there is a website where to download the article or an email of the main author. click and select "display" to know more about the article.

Advanced sequential search

Back to top

In case of multi-criterion search, the corresponding radio button must be ticked.

The screenshot shows the SLIRE.NET search interface with the 'Multi-criterion' search option selected. The search criteria are set to 'Country / Cameroon'. The search results show 1 document. The first document is titled '61 | Mondialisation, distorsion de concurrence et évolution technologique : portée et limites du succès du coton en Afrique Zone Franc'.

Here you have first ticked "country" and selected "Cameroon" in the scroll-down menu. You can tick another criterion, e.g. document type, to continue the search. If you want to search renew the multi-criterion search, you have to click "New selection", e.g. if you want to consult by "author" before searching what a given author has produced for a given country.

There is nothing new in the procedures of joining in, except the need to specify a domain which is indeed the thesaurus carried out by a research network.

For the current version, you can only join in a single domain. Later on, this constraint will be lifted, and multi-adhesion will be made possible.

"COLIRE" is a thesaurus developed to deal with the various impacts of cotton production.

Your subscription must be activated by the network administrator before you can start feeding the data base. In case of no information after your subscription, don't hesitate to contact the network administrator or "owner" (michel.fok@cirad.fr in the case of COLIRE). Do the same if you've forgotten your password

Log-in

Nothing particular to log in, once you know your log in name and your password and that your subscription has been activated.

- Scroll-down here to check if one or all authors of the document is not already registered. Click on the arrow key to validate.
- If not, then type his name and first name with other initials and inform the institution and division to which he/she belongs. If you don't know, select "not informed". Click on the arrow key to validate

Indicating the authors

Back to top

Example of a document to be recorded,

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the URL http://www.slire.net/slire/php/popup1_tpl.php?lang=en&bt_ok=one&tab=nouvdoc. The interface includes navigation buttons (back, forward, cancel) and tabs for 'Autor', 'Details', 'Country', 'Characterization', and 'Validation'. The 'Autor' tab is active, showing a dropdown menu for 'Autors list' with 'Bachelier-Bruno' selected. Below this is a table with columns: Rank, Last name, First name, Institution, and Division. The table contains two rows of data:

Rank	Last name	First name	Institution	Division
1	Fok	Michel	CIRAD	UR 102
2	Bachelier	Bruno	CIRAD	UR 102

At the bottom of the table, there are checkboxes for each row and a legend: 'Delete the selection : check all/ uncheck all'.

Indicating the details of the document

Back to top

Part of what you see to inform about the document to be referenced. You must select the type of document. Here the "journal" type has been selected

The screenshot shows the 'Select a document type' section of the web application. The 'List of document type' dropdown is set to 'Journal article'. Below this, there is a form titled 'Newspaper's article' with the following fields:

- English Title
- Original Title
- Journal
- Year
- Issue Number
- Number of pages
- Volume
- Url
- Email

There are more or less fields to inform, according to the document type. Of course the more precisely you inform; the better.

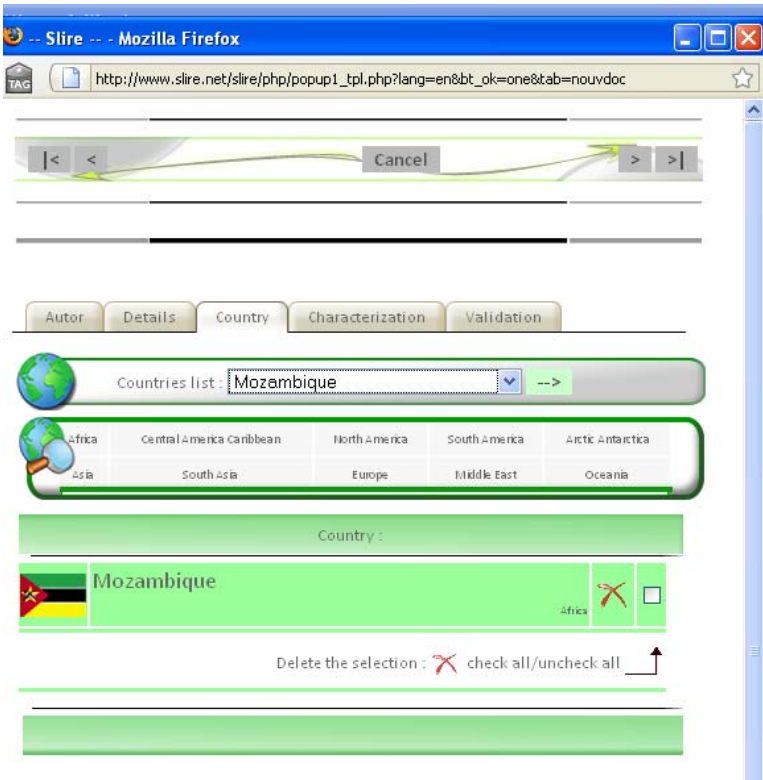

The original title might be in English or not. If not, do your best to provide an English title

Do your best to inform this field if you know where the document can be obtained or downloaded.

Inform this field if you know the email of the corresponding author of the document

Indicating the related countries

Back to top

The document may refer to one or several specific countries. Select them by scrolling-down the related menu. Otherwise, select blank. Here Mozambique has been selected alone, but several countries can be selected sequentially

Referencing according to COLIRE Thesaurus

Back to top

Part of what you see when you start referencing your document according to the thesaurus you have selected, here "COLIRE". The originality is that you are assisted in the referencing

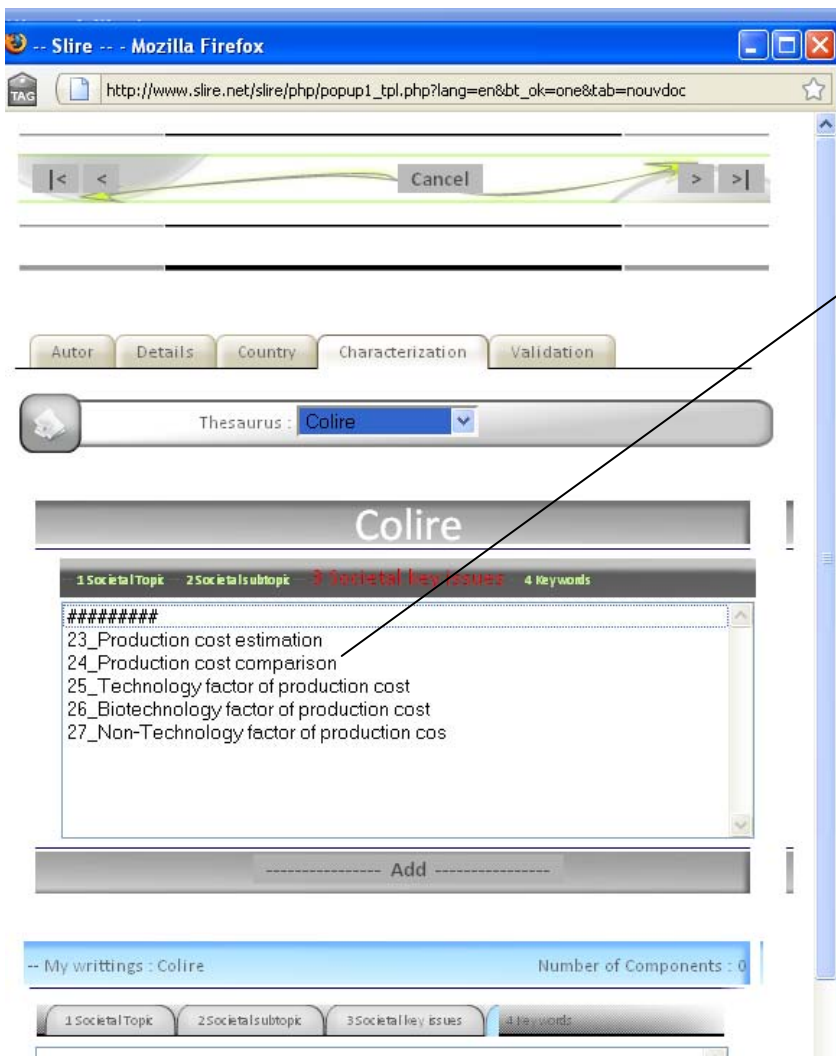

COLIRE is a 4-level thesaurus with the sequence of societal topic; societal subtopic; societal key issues and keywords.

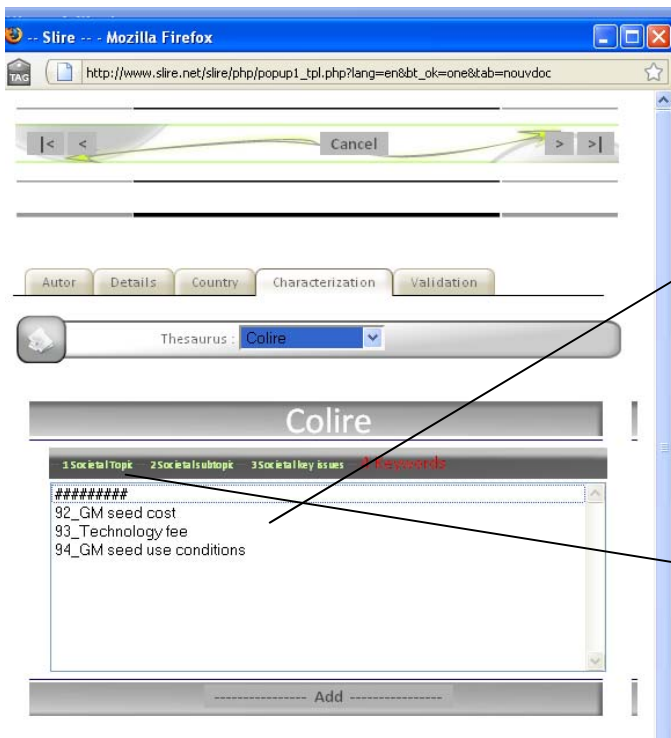

Double-click on one item of the first level to pass to the second level.

Here are the items of the second level, corresponding to "Competitiveness" you have selected at the first level. Let's assume that you want to select "cost competitiveness" here, just double-click on it.

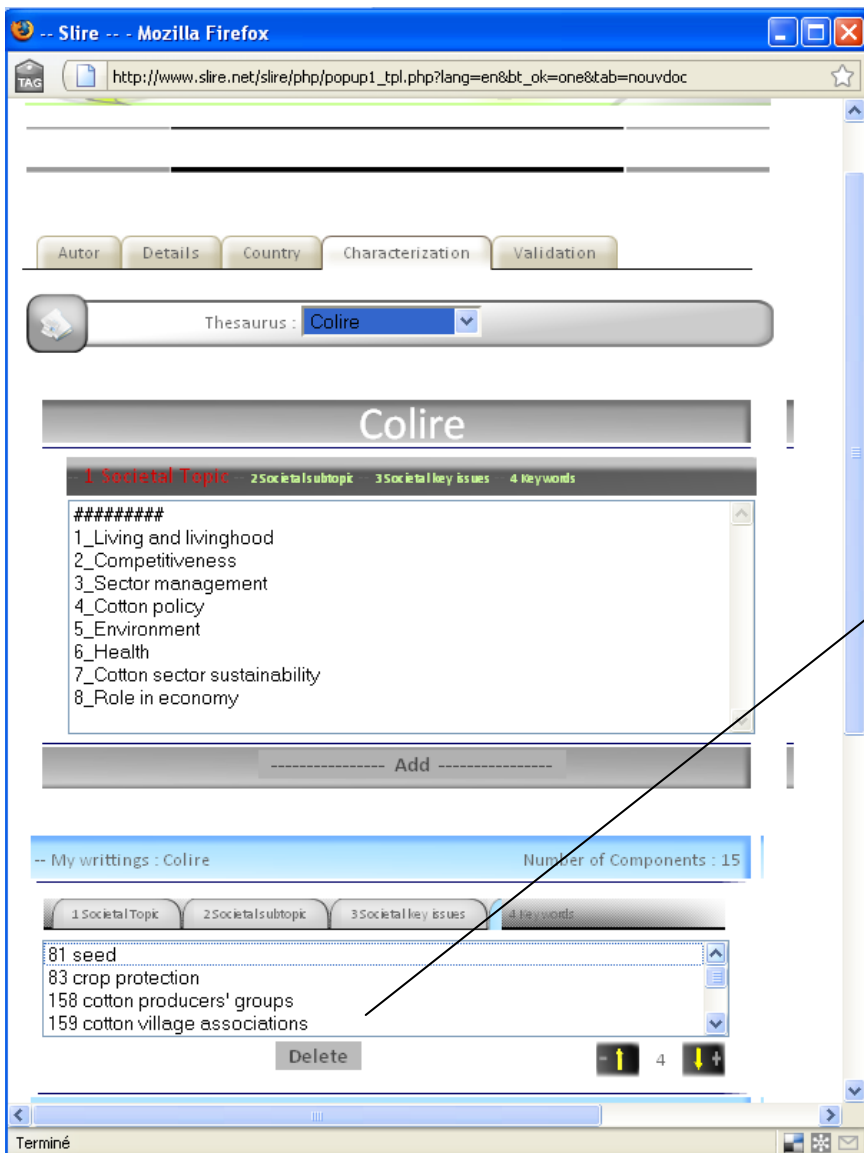

Here are the items of the third level, corresponding to "Cost Competitiveness" you have selected at the second level. Let's assume that you want to select "biotechnology factor of production cost" here, just double-click on it.

Here are the items of the last level, corresponding to "biotechnology factor of production cost". Select by clicking on one item, then click 'add'. Do it as many times as you find relevant keywords for the document you are referencing.

You have just finished a sequence of four levels referencing. Usually, there might be other relevant sequences for your document. So just restart by clicking on "societal topic". You can do this as many times as needed. You are not requested to do this referencing stage comprehensively once for all. This might look demanding. You can do it for the most relevant sequences, and complete them by other ones later on.

Display of the keywords selected according to the sequences of four-level thesaurus. It remains to validate the whole process

Validating the referencing outcomes

Back to top

Before clicking for validation, you have to decide if you post online the referencing you have just done. If this referencing appears to be rather complete, tick "Yes" so that your document will add to the pool of the data base that visitors can consult

Add another document or quit?

Back to top

Rank	Last name	First name	Institution	Division
1	Fok	Michel	CIRAD	UR 102
2	Tazi	Sophia	CIRAD	Valo-ES

Delete the selection : check all/ uncheck all

To add another document, click on "author". The authors you have just selected have remained. If they are the authors of the new document to add, then skip this stage and go "details". Otherwise, select or add other authors.

If you have no more articles to add, then click on "close" to quit
